

Adam Berliant '84 to Receive 2010 Distinguished Alumni Award

The Wyoming School Foundation is pleased to announce that Adam Berliant has been selected to receive the Foundation's 2010 Distinguished Alumni Award. Adam, a 1984 graduate of Wyoming High School, is currently Microsoft's Executive Producer of Xbox LIVE Studios. He has been with Microsoft for fifteen years and past positions have included Director of MSN Entertainment and Director of Product Management/Planning. Prior to Microsoft, Adam was an award-winning investigative journalist, and small business owner.

As the recipient of this award, Adam will participate in the Foundation Day Celebration events in September that include: addressing the entire student body of the Wyoming High School; meeting students, teachers and administrators; and being inducted into the Distinguished Alumnus Society.

Foundation Day is a unique program that sends an important message to students that the excellent education provided by Wyoming Schools will have a profound value in their lives. The Foundation recognizes that students may not truly appreciate their Wyoming education until later in life, but giving them the opportunity to see first-hand the successes and accomplishments of Alumni is a meaningful experience that the Foundation enjoys providing.

The Foundation's previous Distinguished Alumni Award recipients include: Lance Williams '68, Christine Poon '70, Carl Westmoreland '55, Dr. Paul W. Sperduto '76, Professor Diane Shaver Clemens '54, Mark "Hap" Fuller '50, Admiral C.R. "Bob" Bell '48, and Ambassador Thomas D. Boyatt '51.
